1999, the reported month and year of online availability of the PLAN4ever.com website (see Attachment A), we had jointly conceived and reduced to practice the subject matter of claims 1-23 of this patent application. All of the acts reported below were carried out in the United States. As evidence of the conception and reduction to practice of the invention, we submit the following exhibits. As permitted by present practice, the date of each exhibit has been obscured.

Exhibit A is a press release from Aurora Casket Company, which announced the product incorporating the recited invention, which was demonstrated at the National Funeral Directors Association convention prior to April 1999.

Exhibit B is a publication which describes the stir created in the funeral service industry by the product incorporating the recited invention and its selling price prior to April 1999. In particular, the publication mentions the computerized method of the present invention for presenting, searching, selecting, and maintaining funeral arrangement information contained in a database. Further, the publication provides details to the funeral arrangement planning system of the present invention having the ability to interactively guide a user through the funeral planning process, and permitting the user to electronically select funeral products and services prior to April 1999. Moreover, the publication mentions that the product incorporating the recited invention had been installed at four funeral homes prior to April 1999.

Exhibit C is the training manual that was provided with the product incorporating the recited invention prior to April 1999.

5. Although Exhibit A states the "[s]ince 1995, Aurora has steadily built the concept of interactive funeral planning and has applied customer input into every phase of the Family Advisor project," the recited features of the claimed invention were neither previewed nor available to the public until the demonstration at the above-mentioned National Funeral Directors Association convention. Additionally, the filing of the above-identified application occurred less than one year from our disclosure at that convention.
